Terms of Service: December 9, 2020 Version 1.0.2 I would have known about the mobile app before paying $25 for the chart. Next season I could try the app if the graphic works for me The new MoonGuide app works fantastic. I've been using the MoonGuide disc for over 10 years and I'll say that if your intention is to kill mature dollars consistently this is an absolute must in your arsenal. Since I used MoonGuide, I've killed all of my mature dollars, usually two or three per season, on Red Moon nights. More and more people are beginning to understand it and use it in the white-tailed forest, as well as in other types of hunting and fishing, many people have always thought was about the phase of the moon, however, this is not necessarily true is more about the location of the moon in the sky... Absolute must!!!! The lunar guide itself has been a tool that has led to most of my successful hunts the years, especially when it was a mature dollar that I was after... and the new and improved app just made it all the better. From the ability to record the information of every hunt I go to, to the detailed times and dates of the red moons, to the updated weather feature, and the fact that it's really an easy-to-navigate app! It's perfect to help me get the upper hand in some big dollars from Midwest Illinois! Developer Website App Support Privacy Policy What if we told you that there was a way to increase your productivity in deer hunting, and it had everything to do with the moon? If you hadn't heard whispers and rumors of it before, you're probably more than a little cynical. What does the moon have to do with hunting deer? Well, a lot, to be honest. There is a lunar guide that the hunters follow, some even swear by it, and all claim that it helps during the hunt. See, it's all about finding the best time to hunt - and following the moon is a way to find that best time. But why the moon? There has been a ton of research and studies showing that deer move more at dusk; all phases of twilight. The movement of deer changes with each different movement cycle in surprising ways, which means you can find a time where deer are moving the most and plan a hunting trip around this specific time period. With a lunar guide in hand, you might as well figure out when the best times to hunt are. Now that you know the basics of cereals and the moon cycle, here are some tips on how you can get the best deer hunting experience, all by paying a little more attention to the moon in the sky. As every hunter knows, time is everything. Morning move Want to get up early and early? Want to smell the fresh air when the sun starts to rise while you're hunting? Well, there's a specific time to hunt deer early in the morning according to the moon, it turns out it's during a new moon. A new moon is the lunar cycle where the moon is in conjunction with the Sun and can be invisible from Earth. The new lunar cycle may also include the time when the moon appears as a very small and slender crescent moon. During a new moon, cereals are more active during the first few mornings. Compared to your movement and overall activity during the rest of the day during a new lunar cycle, the morning is really when you want to hunt during this time. Movement in the middle of the morning If you are looking for a good time to hunt deer in the middle of the morning, there is a great time to hunt: during non-quarterly periods. What, exactly, is a non-room period, you may ask? Essentially, non-quarterly periods are days that are not within 48 hours of a new quarter phase or full moon. During this time, cereals are more active in the middle of the morning compared to other times of the day. Noon Movement, and if it's another kind of noon hunt? And if you get up early, or even go on a mid-morning hunt, isn't that your style? Well, without fear -- you can always hunt in on Middle! If you want to hunt deer at noon, hunt during the full moon. During the full moon, cereals are very active during noon compared to any other time of the day. This means that you will see, and possibly hunt, more deer during this time than any other - as long as it is during the full moon cycle. Late afternoon move If you are more of a hunter in the late afternoon, you must hunt during the last quarter. The last quarter of a lunar cycle is about five to ten days before the full moon. Deer are notoriously much more apparent and active during the late afternoon at this time during the lunar cycle. Top tips to remember when hunting deer according to the lunar cycleHere is the thing: you have to have a good and constant understanding of the lunar cycle if you want to try to figure out when you should hunt deer (according to this method). This is relatively easy to do as you can figure out the moon cycle by simply looking up online. If you're serious about following and hunting according to the moon cycle, it's okay to make a schedule or create your own calendar. That way, as the new cycle or phase of the moon begins, you know exactly where you are in relation to hunting. In addition, it should also be noted that the moon is not the only thing that controls the movement of cereals and the activity of cereals. Elements such as climate and temperature are still very important. Just because it's a new moon doesn't mean you'll be lucky to finally get an edge over a deer - especially if the weather is horrible outside. Temperature and time are still very important to consider in hunting. Therefore, it should be stated that while the moon can actually influence the movement of the cere the deer, much more does, too. If the weather and temperature are good and you decide to hunt early in the morning during a new moon, there is a high chance that you will have a good day of hunting, according to what all researchers and analysts say. There is always more than one component that helps bring a good hunt to the cereos. Finally, let's talk about the favorite time hunters like to go out and hunt, according to the phases and cycles of the moon. Most of the time, fans' favorite time to hunt is about six to seven days before and after a full moon. For some reason, hunters just continually gather back to this time period as they have the most success (and fun) during this period. It is always worth mentioning this, as some people may not have heard the whole myth of hunting over the full moon (and before and after the full moon). Of course, as we said above, many different components need to meet so there's a perfect day of hunting, but following a lunar guide has become a popular way to identify the best time for hunters to move on to the day. After all, time, when it comes to hunting, really is everything. All.
